THE ANTI-BALDWIN FACTION

REMAIN SILENT.

PLAIN SPEAKING BY EX-PREMIER.

EXPECTS MORE LOYALTY IN THE FUTURE.

A TARIFF FREE HAND.

London, Oct. 30.

The momentous secret meeting of the Conservative Party, assembled at Caxton Hall to-day to hear Mr. Stanley Baldwin's statement of policy and to discuss the leadership of the Party, was attended by seven hundred Conservative M.P.'s and prospective candidates and Tory members of the House of Lords.

The meeting was called by Mr. Baldwin and it had been arranged that after the ex-Premier's address to the rank and file of the Party, he should vacate the chair in favour of Lord Salisbury.

Mr. Baldwin opened by saying that he had always felt it rash to make a declaration of policy too long before a general election and that there were many points in his policy which had not and could not yet be touched upon.

Not Committed.

They were standing on a policy of very thorough safeguarding, but he declined to commit the party, either to Empire Free Trade, or to the taxation of food until he was in a position to say to the electorate that they were going to get something for it.

On Imperial policy he had always held the view that for the leader of the party it would have been in the highest degree rash to have made any pronouncement without waiting to see what was the outcome of the Imperial Conference.

Tariff on Manufactures.

In an outline of his Imperial policy (which received the support of all present with the exception of Lord Beaverbrook) Mr. Baldwin said that he had already decided that nothing short of a tariff on foreign manufactured goods would meet the situation of British industry.

He pledged himself to introduce such a tariff immediately he came into office.

As regards the Imperial Conference, he said that no leader of the Conservative Party could have taken any other line than he took, namely, acceptance of the Dominions' Preference offer and expression of his willingness to have a perfectly free hand to deal.

Requests Free Hand.

The whole position, he declared, had completely changed since the Spring. The Conservative Party now had a logical basis to fight upon.

On this point, Mr. Baldwin exclaimed: "We cannot, of course, go on as we have been going. I shall say no more about that."

Mr. Baldwin then referred to his fiscal policy as a policy of a free hand.

At the conclusion of his statement, Mr. Baldwin asked supporters of his policy to raise their hands.

Lord Beaverbrook's was the only hand that was not raised.

Mr. Baldwin then stated that he had been pressed to resign the leadership of the Party. In some circumstances, he did not say that he would have considered the matter.

No Malice.

"In the present circumstances," he declared, "I cannot give it consideration." (Loud and prolonged applause.)

But if the party, after discussion, told him that it desired another leader, he would walk out without malice and retire from politics. He would do nothing to queer the pitch of his successor.

On the contrary, if the meeting endorsed his leadership, he would expect more loyalty than

H.E. THE GENERAL ROBBED.

DECORATIONS AND ARTICLES
WORTH $1,700.

BEDROOM ENTERED.

Sometime early this morning, a thief or thieves entered Headquarters House, the residence of His Excellency Major-General J. W. Sandilands, and made a clean sweep of medals, decorations and other property belonging to the G.O.C. in his bedroom.

His Excellency attended the ball at Government House last night, wearing his numerous decorations in miniature, and on returning home, shortly before 3 o'clock, left these on a dressing table in his bedroom before retiring.

At 7 o'clock this morning, the discovery was made that a thief, or thieves, apparently through a window which was left open, had entered the room, and made a haul of the entire set of decorations, as well as other valuable articles. The total value of the General's loss is placed at $1,700.

The medals stolen were miniatures of His Excellency's C.B., C.M.G. and D.S.O. decorations, set together with an Egyptian medal and six other medals, on a bar. The intrinsic value of these is $50.

Other articles stolen were a plain gold cigarette case, square pattern, with patent slide opening, valued at $30; a silver pocket watch valued at $25; a pair of plain gold cuff-links, valued at $10; a pair of enamelled gold cuff-links with the Cameron crest in enamel on all four faces, valued at $15; a pair of tortoise-shell spectacles in a soft flat fabric case, valued at $20; a bunch of keys, and $1.20 in loose money.

A watchman and a sentry were on duty as usual during the night.

MRS. VICTOR BRUCE ARRIVES AT RANGOON.

London, Oct. 30.

Mrs. Victor Bruce arrived at Rangoon this morning in the course of her flight from England to the East.

Oscar Garden, who is flying from England to Australia, also arrived at Rangoon. They intend continuing their journeys to-morrow morning. Mrs. Bruce making for Bangkok and Garden for Singapore. British Wireless.

It will be recalled that on the earlier stages of her flight, Mrs. Bruce crashed near Jask, in Persia, and was in consequence delayed for some time. She has recently resumed her flight, however.

Messrs. Robertson, Wilson and Co. this morning received a telegram from Messrs. Wakefield's in Singapore, to the effect that Mrs. Bruce would be requiring supplies of Castrol 22L in Hongkong and Amoy. Arrangements are accordingly being made.

Mr. Baldwin then retired from the meeting amid loud applause.

Mr. Baldwin's Triumph.

At the conclusion of the gathering, a resolution of confidence in Mr. Baldwin was carried unanimously.

A secret ballot on the question of the leadership, which was held earlier in the meeting resulted as follows:—For change in leadership 115; Against 462.

When Mr. Baldwin entered the House of Commons this afternoon, he was greeted with prolonged cheers from all parts of the House. Reuter and British Wireless.

CRASH OF IMPERIAL AIRWAYS LINER.

THREE DEAD IN MISHAP NEAR BOULOGNE.

WONDERFUL HEROISM OF INJURED MANCHESTER MAN.

DISASTER IN BAD FOG.

Bound from Paris to Croydon on the last stage of the Indian airmail service, the Imperial Airways liner "City of Washington" crashed in a field near Boulogne yesterday afternoon, three of the occupants dying in hospital after being extricated from the wreck by farm labourers who witnessed the disaster.

A story of wonderful heroism accompanies the report of the mishap.

Mr. F. B. Tompkins, of Manchester, whose leg was badly injured, and who alone was capable of getting out without assistance, tried to limp to the village for help but sank down at the side of the road exhausted. His condition may be judged from the fact that later his leg was amputated.

When help arrived, the five remaining occupants were still alive. They were hurried to hospital, but three succumbed to their injuries.

It is not clear whether the pilot is among the victims. One report announces his death. An Imperial Airways statement numbers him among the injured.

The crash was apparently due to engine failure. The pilot was seeking a place to land when he ran into dense fog.

FARM LABOURERS TO RESCUE.

London, Oct. 30.

In a dense fog an Imperial Airways aeroplane bound from Le Bourget to Croydon crashed in a field about ten miles from Boulogne to-day. One passenger and two of the Company's employees were killed, and three other passengers were injured. The cause of the mishap is unknown.

London, Oct. 30.

Three of the occupants were killed and three injured in the wreck of the airmail liner "City of Washington" from India, near Boulogne to-day. Reuter.

Completely Wrecked.

Boulogne, Oct. 30. The Imperial Airways liner "City of Washington" crashed near Boulogne at half-past two this afternoon.

The great machine was completely wrecked. Farm labourers, witnesses of the crash rushed to the spot and extricated five of the occupants, all of them severely injured.

They were rushed to hospital at Neufchatel, and three of them later died as the result of their injuries.

The killed are the pilot, named Flynn, the mechanic, Mason, and a passenger, Street.

Went For Help.

At first it was thought that there were only five occupants, but the sixth was soon afterwards found lying by the side of the road, exhausted and badly injured in the leg.

He was Mr. F. B. Tompkins, of Manchester, a passenger. In spite of his injuries, he was trying, with the utmost gallantry, to limp to the village for help.

Company's Statement.

Later. The Imperial Airways confirm that Street and Mason are dead, and also the mechanic, James Flynn, and two passengers, H. Bolsover and F. B. Tompkins, both of Manchester, are injured.

The cause of the mishap is not, at present, known. Reuter. (There appears to be some confusion of names. Reuter reports from Boulogne that the pilot, Flynn, was killed, and that three of the four passengers escaped with severe injuries. The Imperial Airways statement seems to suggest that two passengers were killed, or that Flynn was the name of one of the passengers.)

FAMOUS RUGBY PLAYER.

DR. J. A. R. SELBY FOR HONGKONG.

COMING HERE AS SPECIALIST MEDICAL OFFICER.

HOLDS SCOTTISH CAP.

Local sportsmen will be interested to hear that Dr. J. A. R. Selby, the well-known Edinburgh and former Scottish international Rugby player, has received an appointment as Specialist Medical Officer in Hongkong, and is sailing from Home at an early date to take up his new post.

It will be recalled that during the recent Budget debate, H.E. the Governor (Sir William Peel), in dealing with the Medical Department, stated that the appointment of a venereal disease specialist was being proceeded with. He added that some time ago application was made to the Secretary of State to secure the services of such a specialist, but that at the time of speaking, one had not been secured. "I am particularly anxious that this branch should be improved," said His Excellency.

"as there is no doubt that in the matter of social hygiene, Hongkong is distinctly backward."

The appointment of Dr. Selby is no doubt to this position, as he is a venereal disease specialist.

Career Outlined.

Dr. Selby graduated at Edinburgh University five years ago, and has since been engaged in hospital work at Bradford, in the Venereal Diseases Department and the Bacteriological Department of the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh, and as resident medical officer at East Pilton Hospital, Edinburgh. For the past six months he has been resident surgical officer at St. Paul's Hospital for Genito-Urinary Diseases, London.

Dr. Selby is one of many post-graduates from the Edinburgh School who have taken up venereal diseases as their special branch of medical work, and who in the past eight or nine years have received important appointments in Britain and the Dependencies.

Educated at George Watson's College, Dr. Selby played for his school at cricket and Rugby football, and subsequently for the Watsonians XV. from 1919 to 1926 and again from 1928 to the end of last season. He also played for Bradford and Yorkshire in 1926-27. He received an international "cap" against Wales in 1920, his first year of senior football.

Fine Rugby Player.

A Home paper, commenting on the appointment, says:—"The good wishes of all will go with J. A. R. Selby, the Watsonian scrum half, who has obtained a Colonial Medical Service appointment at Hongkong. Selby joined the Watsonians in 1919 and received an international 'cap' in his first season of senior football. He was young for such a distinction, but no-one who saw the match against Wales at Inverleith in 1920 will forget his heroic defensive play in the closing minutes of a gruelling game. Everybody seemed to have his watch in his hand as the game surged near the Scottish line, but Scotland, although a man short, hung on to their lead and won by nine points to five."

"Fears had been entertained as to Selby's experience, but he might

THE RED MENACE IN PHILIPPINES.

CHINESE CONSUL ASKED TO CO-OPERATE.

DEPORTATION LIKELY.

Manila, Oct. 13.

The first definite steps towards ridding the Philippine Islands of the menace of Chinese Communism was taken last night when the Chinese Consul was asked to co-operate with the police. The need for action was demonstrated last week-end when two prominent members of the Kuomintang were stabbed and valuable property—two Chinese cigar factories—were set on fire.

An appeal has been made to the Chinese Consul in Manila to assist the police and constabulary by furnishing the names of Communists and known agitators for the purpose of forwarding them to Governor-General Davis with a recommendation for deportation.

The Chinese district is being heavily patrolled, and it is believed that the roving bands of Communists have been temporarily cowed. The Constabulary are assisting.

There is every indication that there will be no cessation of the activity of the authorities before the danger is definitely averted. Reuter.

DANGEROUS DRUGS CONFERENCE.

TURKEY TO CO-OPERATE IN LIMITATION.

London, Oct. 30.

At to-day's session of the meeting of manufacturing countries preliminary to the Conference on the limitation of manufacture of dangerous drugs, the delegation representing the Turkish Republic made its first appearance.

Responding to a speech of welcome, Mazhar Bey, principal Turkish delegate, said the Turkish delegation would lend its loyal co-operation and would make every possible effort towards ensuring the complete success of the Conference.

The Chairman expressed the satisfaction of the Conference on hearing the statement.

The Conference then considered details of a plan for setting up an International Office for effecting limitation of manufacture in each manufacturing country and the distribution of drugs manufactured to all countries according to their medical requirements. —British Wireless.

QUAKE HAVOC ON ITALIAN

ADRIATIC COAST.

IN 20 MINUTES.

MANY KILLED AND SEVERAL HUNDRED INJURED.

NINE SLAIN IN CHURCH

Although its effects were small in proportion to the terrible national disaster that accompanied the visitation of July, the earthquake which struck a large area on the Adriatic coast of Italy yesterday has created much havoc. Many lives have been lost, important buildings have been destroyed, and the number of injured runs into hundreds.

The worst features of the previous disaster were avoided by reason of the fact that yesterday's violent shocks occurred at eight o'clock in the morning.

The first message to reach the Colony, via Reuter, stated that twenty-two persons were killed in the Senigallia district and two were killed and 60 injured at Ancona, in the compartment of Marche.

Much Material Damage.

Much material damage was done in the west of the Province of Marche, and a number of houses collapsed at Ancona. The authorities were rushing rescue parties to the areas affected.

Later. Owing to the interruption of communications it is difficult to obtain exact information regarding the damage in the outlying districts, but three more deaths are reported from villages near Ancona.

Eight persons were injured at Fossano, twenty-two were injured at Mondolfo and six at Fano.

A tidal wave followed the earthquake. It swept the harbour of Ancona, which is one of the finest in Italy.

Fortunate Circumstance.

Fortunately, the earthquake occurred at an hour when most people were already up, but it terrified the population, which rushed into the streets in great alarm.

The earthquake zone extended northwards through Emilia and Marche, the chief places affected in Emilia being Ferrara, Ravenna and Faenza, while Ancona and Fabriano suffered most in the Marche area. Reuter.

Three Major Shocks.

Later. The telephones are being re-established and more reliable reports of the earthquake disaster are now obtainable.

The first shock was the most violent, but there were three major shocks within a period of twenty minutes, with its centre in the region of Senigallia, where ten persons were killed, and 275 injured.

Roof Collapse During Mass.

Some of the casualties in Senigallia resulted from the collapse of a church roof during Mass. The priest and eight members of the congregation were killed and many were injured.

The damage at Ancona is chiefly to medieval architecture. There were comparatively few casualties, the list at present including 3 killed and 64 injured. Reuter.

SMYRNA DISASTER.

MANY DEATHS DUE TO RAIN
DOWNPOURS.

Constantinople, Oct. 30.

Mosques and school buildings at Smyrna have been turned into shelter for 2,500 families who have been rendered homeless through the devastating rains, which have already caused 184 deaths. Many more are missing.

The damage already done is estimated at 42,000,000. Reuter.

The Royal Observatory reports that the depression has deepened. It is now about 300 miles S.W. of Tokyo, moving eastward. Another has formed over Tongking. The local forecast is:—East or S.E. winds, moderate; generally cloudy, occasional rain.

ACTION OVER DEAL IN LADIES' HOSE.

CLAIM AND COUNTERCLAIM DECIDED IN COURT.

A deal in "Tramella" stockings resulted in an action being heard by Mr. Justice Jacks, in the Summary Court, in which his Lordship delivered a written judgment yesterday in favour of the defendants. The plaintiff was Au Sun Yue and Co., of the Industrial and Commercial Bank Building, Queen's Road Central, and defendants were Messrs. D. Chellaram, of third floor, China Building, general exporters and importers. Plaintiff claimed $802.87 as money payable for the price of stockings bargained and sold, while defendants counterclaimed for $252. Mr. F. C. E. Rendall was for plaintiff and Mr. J. T. Prior defended.

Giving judgment, his Lordship said:—The plaintiffs in this action seek to recover the sum of $802.87, being the price of goods bargained and sold to the defendants under two written contracts. The defendants seek to recover by way of counterclaim the sum of $252, being damages which they allege they have suffered by reason of the failure of the plaintiffs to fulfil the said contracts.

The facts are as follow:—On February 13, 1930, the plaintiffs agreed to sell, and the defendants agreed to purchase, two lots of ladies' silk stockings under two written contracts, the first contract relating to 19½ dozen pairs and the second to 18½ dozen pairs. Details of quality, quantity, size, shade and price were set out in each contract. The goods were sold according to sample. The first contract provided that the goods should arrive "as soon as possible" and the second contract provided that the goods should arrive a fortnight later than the goods ordered in the first contract.

Sub-Sale Contracts. A few days later, namely, on February 21, 1930, the defendants entered into two identical contracts with the Taj Mahal Silk Store for the sub-sale of both lots of goods to the last-named firm at the same price plus a commission of five per cent. A representative of the Taj Mahal Silk Store said in evidence, that he saw samples of the stockings before he entered into the contracts with the defendants. He also stated that he expected the goods to arrive about three months after the date of the contracts, that is about the end of May. At the expiration of three months he went to the defendants' shop to enquire about the goods and informed them that the time for arrival had expired and that he would obtain other goods elsewhere if these were not delivered before the end of June. He also stated that he went to the defendants on several occasions after that and eventually agreed to take delivery early in July; and if they had not arrived then he would order goods elsewhere and sue the defendants for damages. Early in July he ordered goods elsewhere.

There is no evidence that the defendants protested in any way against this time limit laid down by their sub-purchasers. No evidence was given as to what was the earliest possible date of arrival in this case. It was stated that these goods are manufactured in Saxony. It is possible they were not in existence at the time the plaintiffs made their contracts with the defendants, and apart from the time to be allowed for the order to reach the manufacturers, and the subsequent transit of the goods from Saxony to Hongkong, some considerable time might be required for the manufacture of the goods.

Goods Not Accepted. The plaintiffs knew, on July 8, that the goods would arrive on the 19th day of that month and gave notice to the defendants accordingly. On the 19th, when the goods arrived, the plaintiffs notified the defendants and requested them to clear the same as soon as possible. The defendants did not reply to this and remained inactive until August 15, nearly a month later. The plaintiffs, on that day, sent a representative to the defendants' shop with some of the goods and produced samples for examination, but the goods were not accepted as they were said to be not according to sample.

Short in Quantity. On August 20, the plaintiffs' solicitors wrote to the defendants and requested them to take delivery and pay for the goods, intimating that their instructions were to institute legal proceedings if this was not done. On receipt of this letter the defendants' manager went to see the plaintiffs on August 22, and saw some of the goods and the samples. He then learned for the first time that the goods had arrived short in quantity. The plaintiffs allege that the question of whether the goods were up to sample was discussed and they suggested reference to an arbitrator, but the defendants said this was not necessary and they agreed to take delivery and send a cheque that afternoon. They did not do so. The plaintiffs called on the defendants a few days later when the defendants refused to take delivery.

I am not satisfied that the defendants agreed to accept a quantity of goods less than they had contracted to buy, and to pay for them at the contract rate. There is not sufficient evidence to lead me to this conclusion. They had already complained that the goods were not according to sample and I am not prepared to believe that they waived this objection at the last moment, more particularly as they had every reason to believe that their sub-purchasers would not take the goods. I hold that the defendants were entitled to refuse to take delivery on the ground that the plaintiffs could not deliver the full quantity ordered. I give judgment for the defendants on the claim with costs.

Counterclaim. Judgment. I now come to the counterclaim. The plaintiffs failed to supply the correct quantity of goods ordered, and thus put it out of the power of the defendants to call upon their sub-purchasers to take delivery, for they, in their turn, were not bound to take delivery of a smaller quantity if it did not suit them to do so. We know they would not have done so for they had already ordered other goods elsewhere. I hold that the defendants are entitled to recover $52, being the five per cent. commis-

Miss Evenson (American), October 16, Loshan. Released October 21.

Mr. K. N. Tvedt (Norwegian), October 16, Loshan. Now held at Hwanggan, Hupeh.

Bishop Migniani (Italian) and Father De Jennis (French), October 5, Kian, Kiangsi. Released October 15.

Fathers Barbato, Capozzi, Furino (Italian), Father Theffry (French), Sister Ramos (Filipino), Sister Rognoni (Italian), Sisters Le Port, Merle, Larmichant (French), October 5, Kian. Believed now held in South Kiangsi.

Father Von Arx (Swiss), October 16, Pengtsch, Kiangsi. Held near Pengtsch.—Reuter.

Captives Unheard of. Neither Mr. Fischle nor Mr. Kilper of the Basle Mission, who were caught by Red bandits in Kiatingchow in August last year, have been heard from for over two months. Mr. Walter, another German missionary, who was caught at the same time, was ransomed, but there has been many hitches in the negotiations for the release of the others.

Now and again, the bandits have gone back on their word, and asked for an even larger sum of money. Starting with $5,000, they advanced the amount demanded until it reached $50,000, and it has not been possible to make a settlement before the terms have been changed once more.

Soldiers started after the captors of these two missionaries, but were afraid to follow them into the mountains whence they fled, the size of the force being too small.

son which they have lost by reason of the plaintiffs' failure to perform their contract. Though no notice of sub-sale appears to have been given to the plaintiffs, the contracts for sub-sale, which have been put in, afford evidence of the loss the defendants have sustained by reason of the plaintiffs' default. I consider that sum is reasonable. I give judgment for the defendants on the counterclaim for the sum of $52 only and costs.

"CLYDELLA" SPORTS SHIRTS

From the first time you play in a "Clydella" fine flannel shirt, you'll recognise that sports needs have been specially studied. The perfect "Clydella" cut and tailoring effect a freedom of action you've probably never before experienced. A "Clydella" shirt looks as good as it feels—it makes a "good return" from every laundering. Hard wear does not alter its rich soft texture, and it is guaranteed unshrinkable.

U.S. UNEMPLOYMENT.

TWENTY MILLION PEOPLE MAY FEEL THE PINCH.

Washington, Oct. 30. Mr. Green, the President of the American Federation of Labour, has appealed to all groups to join the movement to provide jobs and relief to conquer unemployment. It is anticipated that the official estimate of 3,500,000 unemployed will be increased in the winter months to well over five millions. Including the families dependent on such unemployed, Mr. Green estimates that over twenty million persons, or one sixth of the entire population, is threatened with acute need.—Reuter's American Service.

THE ECONOMIC DELEGATION REACHES TOKYO.

Tokyo, Oct. 30. The British Economic Mission arrived here this evening, representatives of the Foreign Minister, the Japan Economic Federation, and Industrial Club, with the staff from the Embassy, welcoming them at Tokyo station.

Special interest attaches to the fact that this is the first trade mission under Government auspices to visit Japan.

To-morrow, the Mission will be received formally by the Foreign Minister, who is giving a banquet in their honour at the Peers Club in the evening.

On November 6 the members of the Mission will be received in audience by the Emperor, while the programme of their visit to Tokyo also includes dinners and lunches in their honour at the Embassy and by the Japan-British Society, Japan Economic Federation, Industrial Club, and British Association.

After visiting certain shipbuilding yards and factories, the Mission will proceed to Osaka to inspect cotton mills, and so forth.—Reuter.

ADMIRAL CHAN CHAK GOES NORTH.

VISITING NANKING TO MAKE REPORT.

Canton, Oct. 30. Admiral Chan Chak, accompanied by his secretary Mr. Shin Choshu, and Mr. Pao Liang-chu, committee member of the Municipal Party Headquarters, left yesterday for Hongkong, to take the Empress of Canada to Shanghai and thence to Nanking.

In a press interview the Admiral said that his visit to Nanking was in order to attend the 4th Plenary Session, to report to the Central Government regarding the recent campaign against the rebels, and to obtain instructions concerning Naval development.

It is understood that during the absence of the Admiral, his Chief of Staff, Chan Ting, will take charge of all affairs in the Naval H.Q.—Canton News Agency.

A New Kind of Animal.

"Now who remembers the name of the animal we were talking about, yesterday," asked the teacher. "Please, sir, the Warner!" "The Warner! What nonsense. There's no such animal."

Another little hand shot up.

"Please, sir, he means the otter."

The first little boy wasn't so far out. His method of remembering—association of ideas—was almost successful. The error was but a matter of degree. Mind scientists tell us that all memory is built up upon association of ideas either conscious or unconscious, one idea tagging on to another in a continuous chain. That is why, when we are striving to remember something, we cannot always recall it instantaneously. We have to ponder, chase back along the line until we get to it. But it doesn't need much effort to remember Baby's Own Tablets when the children are off colour. The name itself exactly describes this ideal juvenile health-regulator. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept handy in the home, for when the necessity for a corrective arises, it is promptness that counts. Administered at the first symptoms of illness the tablets prevent the development of more serious conditions. Baby's Own Tablets correct infantile indigestion, colic and constipation, check diarrhoea, expel worms, allay fever, colds and croup. They are gentle and soothing in their action on the delicate membranes of the internal organs of the child. During teeth they are especially invaluable, easing the pains and thus, by perfectly natural means, inducing sound sleep, although they are guaranteed to contain neither opiate, nor narcotic. Safe, pure, pleasant to take and gently effective, they are truly the children's very own medicine. Obtainable from chemists everywhere.

WOMEN'S WORLD

FOR OUR LADY READERS.

Embroidering the Facts of Fashion.

Embroidery returns to the scene of chic via Paris. On a white 'satin evening' skirt (left) Patou places a georgette tunic blouse almost entirely embroidered in pearls; note the long sleeves. The cape of an evening ensemble (centre) shows the same embroidery as the dress, emphasizing the downward movement of the cut. Another formal ensemble (right) from Patou reveals a modernized version of the use of embroidery as a trimming; the pattern is carried out in tubes and paillettes in silver and crystal, combined with very pale gold and copper threads on dead white crepe Bilitis.

YOUR CHILDREN.

[By Olive Roberts Barton.]

Until not so very long ago the question of a boy's profession or vocation was up to the will of his parents. At certain periods of history it has even been decreed by custom. Whatever the case, his career was determined as much without his opinion as his christening.

Recently people interested in youth have been urging parents to allow their children to follow their natural impulses in choosing a profession when they grow up. And parents have followed this advice pretty closely. It has become the general custom to wait until the spirit moved John to be a lawyer, or an electrical engineer, before making an attempt to shape his education in any particular direction.

Meanwhile John is allowed more time, year after year, if the divine fire of a specific genius has not yet announced its presence. He is finally sent to college to get a good general education. When he comes out he will be only twenty-one or twenty-two, and perhaps by that time he'll have more definite ideas about his future.

Now this is all very fine and I, for one, am a believer in a good firm background of academic education for any special work. But without doubt it seems that two things should be done.

Maybe Parents Can Help.

The first lies with the parents. I believe that there was more than a little virtue in the old-fashioned method of helping John to make up his mind, and rather early at that, as to his future efforts to look out for himself. "My boy is to be a so-and-so" was probably condemned too quickly by the self-expressionists. What if there is no self-expression? Unless a boy has shown a decided preference or ability to be one thing—and in that case most certainly he should be trained along that line—then I believe his parents should take things in their own hands and say, "We wish our son to be a doctor," or "a lawyer," or "a teacher," or "a business man," and start out to educate him with that end definitely in view.

It will probably relieve the boy greatly at that. Most young people want to be told. They aren't all geniuses. They haven't all hobbies. The second matter lies with the educators. Twenty-two is old for a boy to graduate from academic work if he intends to continue in the academic field. Life is short. The age limit of greatest usefulness for men of all classes, to-day, is officially forty. Ask the industries—they will tell you.

And so I suggest—help the boys to make up their minds early. And am I overstepping the bounds when I ask whether, with forty such a short time ahead, or even fifty, a boy should spend the years from six to twenty-two getting a general education that sends him out into the world unprepared for anything in particular, and after that dig in from two to four years more fitting himself for something by which he can earn his bread and butter?

Is it economically a good thing? And is it fair either to his parents or to him?

READING FACES.

A Child's Puzzle.

When I was a small child I used to be puzzled often by someone who would occasionally speak of having "read" someone's face, and I came to the conclusion that the reading of faces must be a later acquired and much more difficult accomplishment than the reading of print, which already was, to some extent, mine.

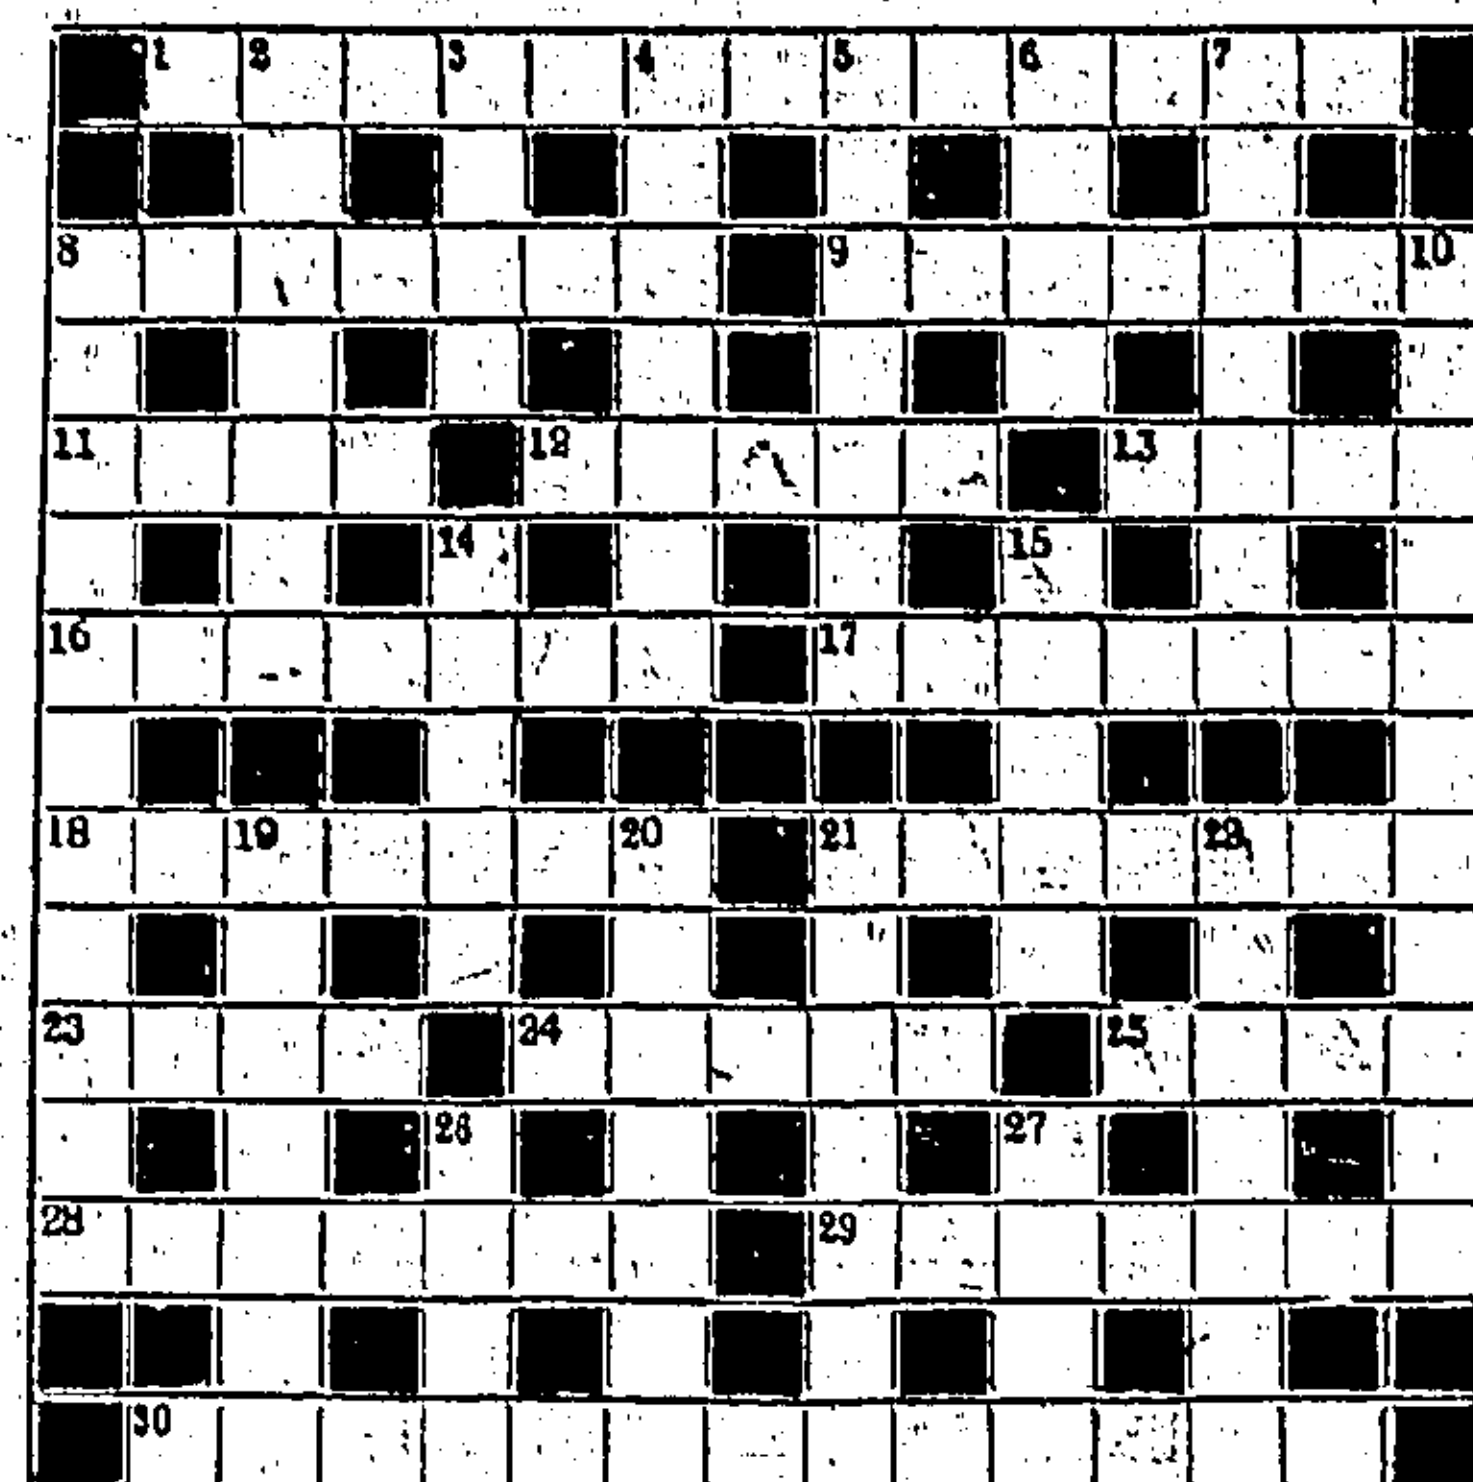

But now I wonder whether it is an accomplishment which may be won by anyone who cares to try or a gift which comes to some, and never at all to others. For how, otherwise, can you explain the hardness of those people who pass through life without ever showing the slightest sign of sympathy with the suffering or the poverty-stricken souls they meet on the way?

They appear to be simply unconscious of the existence of human suffering. Is it just that they have been denied the gift of reading faces—those books, lined with care and printed by time and sorrow, that we see ranged opposite to us every day in cars, in trains, or as we walk along the streets?—H.M. in Exchange.

WALL LIGHT.

A horizontal wall light has two wedge-shaped ends, and the panel in front shows birds exquisitely moulded in low relief. It is the uncommon shape which lends distinction to this fitting.

THE SOVIET WAY.

The Soviet's attempt to side-step its no-propaganda pledge to Brittain by the simple process of stating that it cannot control the activities of the Third International does not surprise us. In common with British people all over the world, however, we shall be surprised if the matter is taken no further. It has been obvious for some considerable time past that Soviet propaganda has been continuing in various parts of the British Empire, in utter defiance of the solemn pledge entered into with Great Britain. In June last, during a debate on the matter in the House of Commons, Mr. Henderson said he would not try to persuade the House that propaganda was not going on, but he had to bring it home to the Soviet Government before action could be taken. A special committee has, in the meantime, been investigating the matter, with the result that sufficient proof has been forthcoming to warrant
Mr. Henderson informing the Russian Ambassador that the Soviet Government has not been observing the pledge. It will thus be seen that the British Foreign Secretary is no longer able to take refuge in the plea that the propaganda cannot be brought home to the Soviet—he has definitely asserted that the Russian Government has broken its pledge.

It is worth recalling some other assertions made by Mr. Henderson at the time diplomatic relations were resumed between Britain and Russia last year. Speaking in Parliament in November, he declared that Soviet propaganda in Great Britain and the Dominions "would not be tolerated in any form at any time." What is even more to the point was his further statement that he had plainly informed the Soviet that the Third International "would be regarded by the British Government as an organ of the Soviet Government." On another occasion, a few weeks later, Mr.
Henderson said it was the intention of the Government that the pledge, which it regarded as clearly applicable to the propagandist activities of the Third International, should be observed both in the letter and spirit. Nothing could be more definite or specific than these declarations. The position now is that the propagandist activities have, on Mr. Henderson's own showing, been brought home to the Soviet Government, which entered into an explicit agreement with Britain that it would not indulge in or countenance any such activities in British territory. All that it can say, in excuse, is that it is unable to control the Third International. This, of course, is sheer absurdity, since the Third International is the Soviet Government.

What is of immediate moment, however, is the likely policy of the British Government towards Russia now that the latter country has flagrantly broken its pledged word.
Surely the matter is not to be allowed to rest with a mere formal protest to the Russian Ambassador. If so, it will amount to tacit agreement with the Soviet attitude, equivalent to an admission by Brittain that we cannot expect the Russian Government to control the Third International. Such a position could not be tolerated for one moment, the more so since this propaganda pledge was stressed more than any other issue at the time relations between the two countries were resumed. Russia must be taught that she cannot play fast and loose with solemn international obligations—that if she gives an undertaking, it must be observed.

Silver Revolution.

Although it has yet to be demonstrated that the scheme is intrinsically sound and worthy of consideration, the proposal for the establishment of a Bank of the Empire contains points of very considerable interest to residents in the Far East, Chinese and foreign.
Sir Oswald Mosley, who appears to have borrowed his ideas chiefly from Mr. J. T. Darling, a director of the Midland Bank, believes that the fundamental reason for the adversity through which Britain is passing is the absence of the rationalisation of the Empire's gold. When he referred to international negotiation for bringing order out of chaos in the world financial system, he had in mind the essential part of Mr. Darling's scheme, which is the rehabilitation of silver, the depreciation of which has had disastrous effects on world trade by destroying the purchasing power of Asia. Briefly, the plan involves the pooling of the Empire's gold resources, totalling £250,000,000 in a new Bank of the Empire, the shareholders to be the note-issuing banks and authorities of the Commonwealth. The new Commonwealth Bank would issue against the gold a new money—not coin, but a money of account, for which the name Rex is suggested.
The Bank would be prepared to buy gold at a fixed minimum price, paying for it in Rex. The minimum suggested is One Rex for 113 grains of fine gold, the content of the British pound sterling. Each country would retain its existing currency—the pound in Britain, South Africa and Australia, the dollar in Canada and the rupee in India and so on, but these moneys would be based on Rex instead of gold. The Bank would have a monopoly right over the gold produced in the Empire, totalling some £50,000,000 yearly. The whole effect of the scheme, apparently, is a departure by the Empire from an unalterable gold standard, for its unit. The British pound, for instance, now changeable into gold for international purposes at a fixed rate, would be based on Rex instead of gold and the Bank of the Empire would reserve the right to reduce the amount of gold it would give for the Rex. This apparently would completely check the gold and price fluctuations which—in the opinion of leading economists—is the principal factor in the grave industrial depression. But the important part of the scheme from the Eastern viewpoint is what Mr.
Darling calls the "new bimetallism." This plans the rehabilitation of silver by providing that the Bank of Empire shall buy silver at a fixed ratio to its minimum price for gold. That is to say, assuming a fixed rate of 20 to 1, the Bank would pay in Rex the same price for 20oz. of silver as for 1oz. of gold which would confer on silver a value of about 51d. a fine ounce and would immediately increase the value of China, and Hongkong currency to three times their present value. The equilibrium between gold and silver, it is contended, would be maintained by the Bank of the Empire's power to change its price for gold, made possible by its domination of the gold standard. The one grave objection to the scheme, of course, is the fact that silver has ceased to be a precious metal. If silver obtained as a by-product in the extraction of tin, copper and other metals was endowed with a fictitious price, production would be stimulated, and the surplus stocks would increase out of all control. And they would all gravitate to Britain at the enhanced price. We may assume, therefore, that even if the gravity of the effect of cheap silver on world trade is of vital importance, the problem is not likely to be met by the revolutionary proposals of Mr. Darling.

EVELYN WAUGH discusses "FOR ADULTS ONLY."

THE other morning I read in my morning paper, in the page where "Onlooker" looks at life, that a peer, anxious to take his children to a cinema, had been forced to leave London in disappointment; he had been unable to find any programme suitable for them. Why, "Onlooker," asked, does someone not start a children's cinema?

But, where, oh where, can one find a cinema to which one can decently take grown-ups?

There are, it is true, numerous films classified "for adult audiences." One can see these all over the country, and, if one goes to an afternoon performance, the dialogue will, as often as not,
be completely submerged in the yells and catcalls of over-excited children.

But, in spite of their popularity, these films are not at all what one might expect. If one consulted an educated Martian about what films were exclusively suitable for grown-up people he would no doubt give some such answer as this:

"It is natural for the very young to be interested in violence, whether comic or dramatic; they will enjoy films showing any kind of chase or combat. They have not a fully developed sense of probability, consequently they applaud exaggerated feats of heroism; they like to see a single soldier hold back an army, they admire athleticism, and delight in seeing people jump from galloping horses on to moving trains;
they are easily deceived by fake photography; they have no firsthand experience of love, and readily believe in permanent fidelity and felicity and other romantic fictions. They are easily amused and dazzled by great display in the production.

Unwanted Defects.

"Grown-ups, on the other hand,
have more serious and penetrating interests. They want the characters and the details of a plot to be convincing; they do not want cheap sentiment, mother love, mock heroics; they will detect absurdities in historical facts;
they do not want facetious comments in their 'interest films';
they do not want to see film versions of their favourite books perverting the plots, sticking on happy endings, cutting out important scenes which might hurt undeveloped sensibilities, introducing 'love interest' where it is inessential.

"Above all grown-ups will be bored by vulgarity and excess in the production. They will prefer to see one or two first-rate dancers to an army of chorus girls; they will appreciate subtlety in artistic effect. They will welcome experiment; they will not be taken in by mere eccentricity."

These are the qualities one might reasonably expect in a film suitable for adult audiences.
Instead, this label means only one thing—sex. It means the same silly, secondhand stuff about love, only in this case the situation is complicated by the marriage of one or both of the lovers. Either this, or it means that the characters, besides being thieves, drunkards, blackmailers, murderers, and adepts at all the other crimes towards which children are assumed to be sympathetic, are also obsessed as indulging in irregular love affairs.

Every year there are produced in London four or five plays, at least to which one can go quite wholeheartedly for enjoyment.
There is hardly a single film for which one does not have to make allowances. One has to make a deliberate effort to put oneself into the state of mind to accept and enjoy the second-rate. Half one's pleasure has to come from laughing at, not with, the film, in detecting gross Americanisms and solecisms, in affecting an exaggerated concern for the welfare of impossible characters.

The truth is that the film industry will try to do too much.
It will insist as no other art or industry has ever tried to insist, upon everything being suitable for everybody.

No Wonder They Fail.

The result is that it produces a commodity mildly unsuitable to almost everyone. It will not produce children's films or grown-ups' films. It aims instead at the adolescent. The pimply youth and the giggling girl who embody all the lamentable characteristics of both ages—childhood without its freshness and purity and credulity, age without wisdom or maturity or culture.

It is no wonder that they fail.
It is as though a writer set out to compile a book which was to be both a fairy story and first reader, a text-book on psychology, a work of scholarship, a novel, an adventure story, tragedy, drama and comedy, an encyclopedia, a cookery book and a daily newspaper in one. But because the commercial organisation of the films is so far in advance of their

CHINA AVIATION SCHEME.BIG ORDER OF AMERICAN AEROPLANES.

MOSCOW DEADLOCK.

Nanking, Oct. 30. An elaborate programme by the National Government to expand its Aviation Corps by the purchase of 100 bombing aeroplanes from American firms has been submitted to the Fourth Kuomintang Plenary Session for final sanction. The programme sets forth details for the reorganisation and expansion of the Aerial Department.

General Chang Hsueh-liang, head of the Manchurian Government, is understood to be greatly concerned over the resumption of Soviet military activities in Heilungkiang and has ordered the Heilungkiang and Kirin Governments to dispatch strong contingents of Manchurian troops. Four special envoys have been sent from Mukden to visit the Heilungkiang and Kirin frontier and to inspect the Manchurian fortifications.

Mukden Order.

Among General Chang Hsueh-liang's latest orders is an announcement strictly prohibiting Manchurian militarists and soldiers in Manchuria, Peking and Tientsin from interfering with politics and affairs pertaining to the civil administration.

General Chang Hsueh-liang has been informed by the Manchurian representatives attending the Moscow Conference of the return to Moscow from Leningrad of General Mo Teh-hui, the chief delegate. In the absence of news concerning the cause of the deadlock it is noted that the Chinese chief secretary to the Conference, who hurriedly departed from Moscow last week and later returned to Harbin, has again left for Moscow. At Harbin he interviewed representatives of General Chang Hsueh-liang and received fresh orders from the Mukden Government. His return to Moscow has renewed hopes of a continuation of the discussion.

Rail Communication.

Following a prolonged suspension of traffic on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, news has come to hand that through express communication will be resumed on Saturday. It is understood that the railway has spent a big sum in repairing the damaged track.

Concerning affairs at Fochow, the Nanking Government has issued an edict requesting the five Commissioners, held by rebels for many months, to resume their posts with the Fukien Provincial Government.

Anti-Red Move.

Marshal Chiang Kai-shek has sent an envoy to Nanchang to confer with the Provincial leaders of Hunan, Hunan, Hupeh and Kiangsi concerning procedure to be adopted in the coming anti-Communist campaign which will be conducted by the joint action of the three Provinces and will commence on Saturday. Marshal Chiang Kai-shek's representative, Mr. Tsung Lin-tung, arrived at Nanchang this morning by aeroplane and received a warm welcome by representatives of the people and Government.

The Government has also instructed the 60th and 61st Nationalist Division (Kwangtung), formerly of Canton, to proceed from Hunan to Kiangsi to take part in the expedition against the "Reds." As the Communist bands are spread over a wide area, it is anticipated that the campaign will last many weeks.

artistic integrity they have secured a virtual monopoly of the market.

The Old Fallacy.

What the film magnates do not realise is that the mean is no greater than the extremes. The average of any series of numbers is one number. The policy of aiming at the adolescent and putting in a few stray sopps for children and adults is not necessarily a wise one from the point of view of bookings. The adolescent is clearly a considerable factor in cinema audiences. The film producers make films suitable for him and for him only. They then look into their cinemas and say, "The majority of our audiences are adolescents. Therefore we must produce films suitable only for them."

It is the old fallacy, which any sales manager can expose, of confusing an actual with a potential public. All over the country there are hundreds of thousands of mature, sensible men and women who will not go to cinemas because the performances bore and irritate them.

It is not a matter of a few high-brows, but of a vast, responsible public waiting for anyone with the initiative to start a cinema for grown-ups.

HONOUR FOR R.101
SURVIVOR.ALBERT MEDAL FOR RESCUE OF COMPANION.

London, Oct. 30. The Albert Medal has been awarded to the Foreman Engineer of the R.101, Mr. H. J. Leech, for his gallant rescue of a companion in the disaster.—Reuter.

Leech re-entered the burning wreckage and rescued a companion, receiving burns while doing so, according to a British Wireless message.

Wireless Officer Disley, in his account of the disaster, mentioned that he was held up by a steel girder and had just overcome it when Leech and Binks dashed in towards him shouting "There's another!" For a time, they thought they were the only three saved, but they went round to the other side of the wreck and found four or five others. They all went into the flames, doing everything they could to find others.

London, Oct. 30. The wireless operator of the R.101, Mr. Disley, who was one of the survivors of the disaster, and who at the first opportunity got into telephonic communication with the Air Ministry and gave early news of the crash, has had his exploit specially recognised. He has been awarded the Medal for Meritorious Services and Order of the British Empire.—Reuter.

FRENCH CONSUL
GENERAL.M. DUFAURE DE LA PRADE PROMOTED.

The many friends of M. Dufaure de la Prade in Hongkong, Shanghai and other places in the Far East will be pleased to hear that he has been promoted Consul-General.

M. Dufaure de la Prade has had many years' contact with consular and diplomatic affairs in China, having served at Shanghai, Fochow and Canton before coming to Hongkong. Since 1926, with the exception of nearly a year spent on furlough in France, he has been in charge of the local Consulate, and in the course of his sojourn here has rendered himself extremely popular with all sections of the community.

It is nearly ten years since a Consul-General, in the person of the late M. Reau (subsequently Minister at Bangkok), was last in charge of French consular affairs at this port, and the promotion of M. Dufaure de la Prade to the substantive position will evoke the hearty congratulations that it deserves.

PRINCESS MARGARET
CHRISTENED.CEREMONY AT BUCKINGHAM
PALACE CHAPEL.

London, Oct. 30. Dressed in a cream silk and old lace robe, a hundred and ten years old, which was used for the christening of Queen Victoria and nearly all her descendants, the ten-weeks old Princess Margaret Rose was christened this afternoon in the private chapel at Buckingham Palace.

The ceremony was performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the christening being carried out from the gold "lily" font brought from Windsor Castle.

The King and Queen and the Duchess of York's sister were the chief godparents.—Reuter.

AMERICA'S DRINK BILL.

$200,000,000 INCREASE UNDER PROHIBITION.

New York, Oct. 2. Dry America is paying an annual drink bill of $569,600,000, according to the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment which says that its figures are carefully compiled from bootleg prices obtained in 30 cities. It adds: "If we were to apply top bootleg prices our estimates of the total drink bill would be appalling."

The Association estimates that the country is consuming now 790,000,000 gallons of beer, 110,000,000 gallons of wine, and 200,000,000 gallons of spirits each year, and gives figures to offset the contention of "Dry" leaders that Prohibition is proving an economic boon.

According to Reuter's New York correspondent, the figure quoted is more than $200,000,000 over the amount spent in pre-Volstead days.

Mr. Daniel J. Sully, known in Wall Street as "Dan, the Cotton King," has died at Los Angeles. He made corners in cotton in 1903 and 1904.

UNION CHURCH MINISTER.REV. E. G. POWELL ARRIVES IN COLONY.

SERVED IN THE WAR.

The Rev. E. G. Powell, the new Minister of Union Church, Hongkong, arrived in the Colony this morning aboard the Blue Funnel liner Archives, being accompanied by his wife.

Mr. Powell, who succeeds the late Rev. F. C. Young, comes to Hongkong from a seven years' pastorate at Percy Congregational Church, Bath, where both he and his wife have won much love and popularity. This Church, it may be noticed, formerly had as its Pastor the father of Sir John Simon, the noted politician. Mrs. Powell is a daughter of the late Rev. H. R. Cadwallader, a well-known Congregationalist minister.

When the war commenced, Mr. Powell was a graduate at the University of Wales, but at once joined up and passed through a series of thrilling experiences on the Western Front. Before leaving the Army he had attained the rank of Major in the Air Force.

After the end of the War, he was specially commissioned with three Captains as Assistants to inspect all Air Force Stations in Britain, to put them on a permanent footing and to select the staffs. When this difficult and technical job was completed, he sent in his resignation. His associates deplored this step. His superiors were at first astonished, almost incredulous, and then did all possible to induce him to withdraw it. His reply was, in effect, that, in 1914, he felt the urge to join the forces; but that, now he felt an even greater urge to enter the Christian Ministry and nothing would deter him.

Thus, at a later age than is usual, he entered the Congregational College (Mansfield) at Oxford for a Theological training. On its completion, in 1923, he settled as Pastor at Percy Congregational Church, Bath. Founded in 1853, with a seating capacity of 950, this Church has an honourable history of Christian Service, in that time-honoured city of many memories, Mr. and Mrs. Powell have distinctly enhanced the Church's reputation. They will be warmly welcomed in taking up their work in connexion with Hongkong's Union Church.

MYSTERY OF EX-KING'S PLANS.BID FOR GREEK THRONE?

Is ex-King George of Greece, who is now in London, contemplating a bid to regain the throne? A statement which he made recently at a West End hotel suggests that he may be.

He has been an exile for seven years, and Greece has been a republic since 1924.

When a Times representative inquired if the King had received the support of an influential section of Greek opinion, his private secretary, Major Levedis, said:

"It is not possible to make any further statement but it is likely that there will be another statement shortly."

"Has Mr. Venizelos (the Greek Premier) expressed any opinion on the subject?"

"That, I am not at liberty to say."

Appeals from Greece.

In his statement to an interviewer, ex-King George said:

"My conviction has never wavered that, sooner or later, my people will call me back as their constitutional Sovereign. My departure was the aftermath of painful events and internal trouble the country had gone through."

THE "TELEGRAPH" ART
SUPPLEMENT.Big Variety Pictures
To-morrow.

To-morrow's issue of the Telegraph Art Supplement will contain a great variety of pictures of topical interest.

Amongst these will be some striking pictures of the recent big fire at Wuchow, a group showing M. Vandervelde (the Belgian Socialist) at Canton, and some photographs taken at the wedding in England of Lieut. F.W.N. Bassett, R.N., and Miss Joyce Thornhill of Hongkong.

Of sporting pictures, there will be many, including some taken at the Race Meeting, the presentation of the Baseball League shield to the Japanese team, a group of the Radio Sports Club "A" hockey team, the Filipino Club's children's sports, the University tennis match between the Medicos and Arts, the Revenue Department team which won the Goscombe-O'Sullivan lawn bowls cup, and the opening of the new clubhouse of the Kowloon British School Former Pupils' Association.

Other pictures will include a group taken at a tea party given by the Hongkong University Union to H. E. the Governor and Lady Peel, some scenes from the Hongkong University Arts Association theatricals, and groups taken at the weddings of the Rev. L. N. Watkins and Miss Hazel Somerville, and of Mr. Li Shim-wah and Miss Leung Pui-fan.

through in the past. It was in no wise the result of a decision duly considered or endorsed by the free will of my people. And earnest appeals kept coming from Greece that I should break silence.

"I preferred to wait and give time to public opinion in Greece to take definite shape.

An Enigmatic Reply.

"My return to Greece will not carry predominance for any single political party or faction. I shall know no victors or vanquished, my duty as a king being uppermost to achieve the advent of national solidarity."

The ex-King had obviously given much forethought to his statement.

"That is all I can say," he added.

"Will you be staying long in London?" he was asked.

"Ah, who can say?" he returned enigmatically.

The ex-King's secretary refused to be drawn when asked if the ex-King had received any visitors in London whose presence might indicate support for his appeal.

"I must not say anything at present," he said, "I should have added that the King's temporary home is at Bucharest, Rumania, and Queen Elizabeth, his wife, is going back there now."

Before the Hon. Commr. G. F. EYE SIGHT TEST.

New laws for motorists have been officially announced by Mr. Herbert Morrison, Minister of Transport.

They mark a revolution, for the blind issue of licences to anyone who can pay the fee, no matter what disability he may be suffering from, is to cease.

The new regulations are outlined below.

There will be an absolute bar to any person obtaining a driving licence who suffers from:

Extremely defective eyesight; or Liability to disabling fits. Applicants for licences will have to declare if they suffer from:

Heart attacks; Epileptic fits; or Mental disease in a way likely to interfere with their efficiency as drivers.

The Eyesight.

The nature of the eyesight test has not yet been definitely decided upon, but it is expected that the applicant may have to declare that he is able to read a motor-car number plate in ordinary daylight at a distance of 20 to 35 yards (with glasses if worn).

No test will be made by the authorities; anyone doubtful of his ability must carry out the test himself.

A New-Chronicle representative who carried out a test on the Embankment had no difficulty in reading the numbers of cars up to 35 yards away.

On the other hand, Mr. Sutcliffe, Registrar of the British Optical Association, thinks the suggestion rather excessive. He says:

A man with perfect sight should see a number plate at ... 60 yards. Normal standard of vision would be ... 40 yards.

But as motorists rarely keep their plates in perfect condition the range of standard sight (Mr. Sutcliffe says) is halved, and 20 to 30 yards would be a better test than the 35 proposed.

False Declarations.

Severe penalties on any applicant who makes a false declaration or conceals his disability.

From January 1 all applicants for licences will have to produce a certificate showing that they have insured against third party risks. This certificate will have to be carried, and produced on demand to any police officer.

It will be the duty of every motorist to secure a certificate of insurance before January 1.

Owing to damage to roads and house property steel tyres are to be eliminated and pneumatic tyres will in due course be made compulsory.

Windscreens.

No decision yet whether these should be unsplitterable.

Two thousand applications have been received for the dozen posts as traffic commissioners, who will replace the existing 1,300 licensing authorities.

An important part of their work will be to co-ordinate all road passenger services, fitting them into a common time-table and thus eliminating racing and undue competition for passengers.

All lorries and vans soon to be equipped with guard rails between the wheels.

Proposal that drivers' licences should bear the photograph of the holder not adopted, but it is probable that the licence will have to bear the holder's signature.

These to be standardised to prevent confusion arising from police in various parts of the country employing different signs.

"TELEGRAPH" FILES.

The following extracts are from the Hongkong Telegraph for the week ended October 30th, 1909.

The rate of the dollar on demand was 1s. 8.11/16d.

Messrs. David Sassoon and Co. and Messrs. E. D. Sassoon and Co. each donated $10,000 towards the Endowment Fund of the Hongkong University.

The death occurred of Mr. Choa Leep-chee, the comprador of the China Sugar Refining Co., Ltd.

The wedding took place at the Union Church of Mr. F. M. Crawford and Miss N. E. Stevenson.

Mr. E. R. Hallifax was appointed First Police Magistrate.

The wedding took place in England of Mr. H. C. R. Hancock and Miss E. M. S. Wright.

Mr. E. S. Lindsey was appointed Manager of the British Section of the Kowloon-Canton Railway.

ATHLETIC MAY NOT PLAY

THE FIXTURE LIST.

[By "Wanderer."]

As far as can be ascertained, no decision was reached at last night's meeting of the Chinese Athletic regarding the proposal to withdraw from the league consequent upon the result of the Appeals Board finding in respect of Chan Kwong-ai and Tso Kwai-sing.

Another meeting of the Association is to be held next week, it is believed, and doubtless after an opportunity to "sleep off the situation" sounder judgments will prevail.

I understand, however, that the Athletic may not turn out to-morrow against Kowloon. Nothing definite was known at one o'clock this afternoon.

To-morrow's fixtures are appended:

Senior Division.
South China v. Police.—Caroline Hill, 4.15.
Kowloon v. Chinese Athletic.—Kowloon, 4.15.
H.K.F.C. v. Somersets.—Club, 4.15.
Argylls v. St. Joseph's.

Second Division.
Eastern v. Navy.—St. Joseph's, 2.45.
University v. St. Joseph's.—Chinese, 2.45.
H.K.F.C. v. Athletic Res.—Club, 2.45.
Somersets v. South China.—Sookun-poo, 2.45.
Recreio v. Kowloon.—Recreio, 2.45.

Third Division.
Ewo v. Royal Engineers.—St. Joseph's, 4.15.
Somersets v. South China.—Chatham Road, 4.15.
Fukien v. R.A.S.C.—Chinese, H.V., 4.15.
R.A.O.C. v. Athletic.—Kowloon, 2.45.

The Senior League list has undergone some changes owing to the departure of the Royal Artillery for camp. The match between South China and the Navy has also been postponed, but the Police will play South China, bringing forward their fixture of January 17.

It is to be noted that all matches start fifteen minutes earlier this week than last.

Kowloon Reshuffle.

Bringing in a new player at right back and reshuffling the remainder, Kowloon will again present a different looking team to-morrow when they meet the Athletic. The changes seem to be for the better, and the result of the return of McKelvie to the centre-half position will be watched with considerable interest. This should provide the most attractive game to-morrow, provided the Athletic turn out.

The Club meet the Somersets, and their win over the Argylls last week taken in conjunction with the defeat of the S.L.I. by the Highlanders, should give them confidence. It is my opinion, however, that the Somersets, on their day, are a much more difficult team to beat and the Club have a big task ahead of them.

Another Repeat.

South China appear to be getting through their fixtures in doubles. They will be meeting the Police a second time this season at Caroline Hill, to-morrow. In the match at Kowloon they beat the Police 5-0, and though it is not anticipated that they will obtain a similarly big win, two further points should come their way.

The Argylls, after their upset of a week ago, will be a little more wary when they meet St. Joseph's. But the College team's tactics contain few elements of possible surprise and unless the Argylls have a very bad day they should win.

In the Second Division an extremely interesting match is down for decision on St. Joseph's ground. The Navy Reserves up to date have carried all before them. They are destined for a serious test to-morrow. The University are likely to lose to St. Joseph's, while wins should be recorded by the Athletic, Somersets and Kowloon.

It so happens that the Third Division fixtures consist of four Army teams against four Chinese teams. Fukien may be confident of the result of their match with the SHOCK FOR K.C.C.

ADVISED NOT TO GO ON WITH CLUB HOUSE.

Within a month of the announcement of their new club house scheme, the Kowloon Cricket Club has been advised not to proceed any further with the project. All plans have been suspended.

Although no official explanation is given, it is presumed that the land is likely to be taken over for military purposes.

The vagueness of the unexpected information has left the club "completely in a quandary. So certain were they that the ground would not be required for many years, if ever, that an ambitious scheme embracing the building of a new club house, had been arranged, and some expense incurred in the carrying out of preliminary steps towards its completion. The news has surprised them and the committee is to meet shortly to decide what steps should be taken.

For something like 30 years, the Kowloon Cricket Club has been one of the most popular social and sporting clubs on the Kowloon side. Its grounds are on military property, and it was the knowledge that the area could be resumed by the authorities on short notice that had prevented previous committees from erecting a more commodious club house.

With the recent growth of the club it was decided to erect a larger club house, simultaneously with making the club a limited liability company. Money for this purpose was to be raised by a debenture issue of $60,000, half of which was to be raised immediately, and the remainder as required.

Plans for the new club house have already been drawn and the committee were on the point of calling for tenders for the construction of the building. More than $30,000 has been collected on the debenture issues, and it is the extent in which the club has been already involved in the project that is causing the committee so much anxiety. What its action is likely to be will not be decided until it has considered definite advice from the authorities.

TALES FROM THE BENCH.

LONDON MAGISTRATE'S REMINISCENCES.

The urgent necessity for the appointment of deputies from the Bar to take the place of magistrates absent owing to illness or holidays, is referred to in the late Mr. H. L. Cancellor's book of reminiscences, "The Life of a London Bench," which is published by Hurst and Blackett (18s. net). Mr. Cancellor, who died in September, 1929, was for many years Magistrate at Marylebone, Thames and Marborough-street Police Courts.

In a chapter dealing with a number of colleagues who had been stricken with fatal illness during the past fifteen years, the author expressed his fear that the long list might make the public think that there was something wrong in the constitution of the body of the Metropolitan Magistrates.

"Several causes have contributed to make the list so long," it is stated. "The number of men to do the work has been too small. The knowledge that by asking for sick leave, he will cast the burden of extra days on already overworked colleagues, induces a man to struggle on when he is not fit to be sitting in court."

Mr. Cancellor recommends as a remedy that the Home Secretary should have power to appoint deputies from members of the Bar to take the place of absent magistrates.

"Insulting Behaviour."

The exacting and often extremely depressing nature of the work of a Metropolitan magistrate is well illustrated in the book, though many examples of the lighter aspect of London's seamy side are given. On one occasion, whilst at Thames Police Court, Mr. Cancellor was made the target, much against his will, of what a police officer considered insulting behaviour.

Just after the midday adjournment, a girl stood in the dock charged with insulting behaviour. "What did she say, C. do?" I asked the arresting police constable.

"Just before one o'clock, your Worship was taking your usual walk, and the defendant skipped along behind you imitating your walk to a nicety" was the officer's answer.

Of course the laugh was on the side of the prisoner and against the magistrate; the case was dismissed; the constable was requested not to be so zealous in future.

During the war, in the East End there was a large crop of prosecutions for offences against the Defence of the Realm Act on the part of the alien community. One of these arose from the management of a large temperance home for Scandinavian seamen close to the dock gates. Despite warnings from the authorities, a blaze of light was allowed to shine each night from the upper windows, which were within a few hundred yards of ships and docks.

The defence urged on behalf of the manager of the home at the police court was grotesque, in view of the serious consequences that might have come from his disregard of the law. He protested that it was necessary to keep bright lights in the dormitories because the inmates requested them to find their way to bed, inasmuch as most of them were drunk at that time of night.

Mr. Cancellor believed that there should be a special officer at police courts to deal with applications for legal advice.

The book is fully illustrated with photographs and sketches.

THE PM ALONE CASE.

NEW U.S. CHARGES AGAINST CANADIAN COMPANIES.

New York, Oct. 2.

In the attempt further to strengthen its contentions that the Canadian schooner, "I'm Alone," a suspected rum-runner, sunk by a coast patrol off the Louisiana coast 18 months ago, was a vessel of "bad repute," the United States Government moved to-day for new indictments against the vessel's "operators."

The case began with the presentation of charges to a Federal Grand Jury in Opelousas, Louisiana, which have not been disclosed pending the jury's decision, but which are said to embody evidence gained by rum raids, some of them recent, shedding new light on the alleged wide operations of the rum ring which operated the "I'm Alone."

In addition to indictments against individuals named previously, it was said that indictments would be asked for against three Montreal companies "on evidence" charging them with participation in the "I'm Alone" operation.

The Opening Cruise of the Royal Hongkong Yacht Club is advertised to take place on Saturday, November 1. The First Ladies' Race starts at 3 p.m.

LOCAL HOCKEY.

Y.M.C.A. DEFEAT THE UNIVERSITY.

The Y. M. C. A. just managed to stave off defeat by the University, in their hockey match yesterday. Faced with a score of three-to-two against them at half time, the students had more of the play in the second half, and kept up a running fire on the net. Attyeo, the Y. M. C. A. goalkeeper, was prominent throughout the half, and made some good saves.

The Y. M. C. A. began with two men short, and played under that disadvantage for about three minutes. They had the better of the opening stages of the game, however, and in the first five minutes goals were put on by Martin and Price. For the remainder of the half, the University were mostly in possession, and goals were scored by Souza and Roy.

Just before the bell, Ashton ran through on his own. The University goalie kicked the ball out, but Price shot it back on the rebound. There was no addition to the score in the second half, and the game resulted:

Y. M. C. A. 3; University 2.

In the match played on Wednesday, the University second eleven defeated a Club de Recreio team by two goals to nil.

VOTE OF CENSURE.

OPPOSITION TO BRING UP UNEMPLOYMENT.

London, Oct. 30.

In the House of Commons on Monday there will be a full debate on unemployment, when Mr. Baldwin, the Opposition leader, will move an amendment to the Address, censuring the Government for failure to deal adequately with the problem.

Answering criticisms in the House last night Mr. Vernon Hartshorn, the Lord Privy Seal, claimed that no Government in the last ten years had done anything worth so much as the present Government in financing and providing work schemes for the unemployed. He showed that much of the diminution of export trade was due to permanent causes, and argued that in consequence, more would have to be produced for the home market than ever before.—British Wireless.

WELLS' NEW OUTLINE OF HISTORY.

"BLOODSTAINED TWADDLE OF KINGS."

Mr. H. G. Wells has issued another "Outline" of history.

It is in the form of an interview published in the current "Teachers' World," in which Mr. Wells condemns our present methods of teaching history in schools, and stresses the need for an educational philosophy in dealing with historical ideas.

"Children," says Mr. Wells, "are much more interested in the story of human adventure and discovery and human achievement than in the elaborate, blood-stained twaddle of kings, and wives and princes, campaigns, annexations and national prestige with which we try—despite their wholesome, instinctive resistance—to fill their minds to-day."

The Nation Person.
"It is a great pity," states Mr. Wells, "that we make not the slightest attempt to teach children the truth about the general ideas they employ, to introduce them to the actual meaning of words."

"The consequence is that when they get a word like 'Empire' or 'France' or 'Russia' they make not the slightest attempt to understand how or why such a word differs from other proper names such as James or John or Willie Smith. They come to think of countries as being of the same sort of order of things as human persons."

"Russia is not a person. Russia is a huge country with a great diversity of climate, peoples, languages, methods of production and cultural traditions. Yet people still persist either in regarding Russia as the wonderful, energetic prophet of a new order or as a wicked and malignant conspirator. 'Foolery!'"

"Such a way of thinking is perfectly idiotic, and in the end is bound to lead to idiotic, monstrous, and cruel proceedings such as boycotts, wars, blockades, and the rest of the foolery that is the lifeblood of international politics."

Mr. Wells adds that he has submitted a syllabus of history teaching to the Board of Education, and that he would like to see a good memorandum on the subject.

BARTERING SURPLUS GOODS.

A SUGGESTED WORLD CONFERENCE.

New York, Oct. 2.

Suggestions for a World Economic Conference, at which the nations would seek to barter their surplus goods for the surpluses of other countries, are engaging the attention of officials at Washington.

It is reported that these suggestions first came from British private sources with the idea of exchanging surplus rubber for cotton, and were quickly followed by overtures from Japan of exchanging silk for cotton. Since then, Brazilian coffee and Cuban sugar have also figured in the conversations, which are entirely informal, but admittedly might be a valuable factor in solving the problem of ending the worldwide economic depression.

The chief difficulties consist of such matters as interference with normal trade and the problem of storage and of ultimate consumption, since surpluses taken from one country by another must ultimately be disposed of without interfering with normal trade, and at a price to meet the heavy expenses of storage.

Incidentally it may be stated that manufacturers of farm machinery are reported already to be carrying out some bartering on their own account, although this is entirely domestic in character, and not related to the suggestion of an international exchange. Several of them are reported to be accepting wheat in payment for farm implements for the first time since five years ago the International Harvester Company accepted in the place of cash maize calculated at 15 cents, a bushel above the prevailing market price.

A RESUMPTION OF BRAZIL'S TRADE.

BANKS REOPEN UNDER A MORATORIUM.

New York, Oct. 30.

Fifteen million dollars worth of gold has arrived for the Guaranty Trust Company from the Banco do Brazil.

The Associated Press reports from Rio de Janeiro that the Junta is taking steps to restore commercial life in Brazil. The banks have reopened, working under a thirty days' moratorium.—Reuter's American Service.

Note Issue Suspended.

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 30.

The Junta has resolved to suspend the issue of notes of the value of three hundred thousand centos, on which the previous government had decided. Only one third of the issue has been made.—Reuter's American Service.

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Celia Rogers, just out of high school, spends a hot July day looking for a job. Her mother, Margaret Rogers, is a widow, employed as a seamstress in a dress shop. On the day the story opens Margaret receives a letter which she conceals from Celia. It is an offer, signed John Mitchell, to provide the girl with every advantage of education, travel and social position if Margaret will give her up. Margaret declares she will never do this.

Celia goes for a drive with Barney Shields, young newspaper photographer. Barney tells Celia he loves her and swears that some day they will be married. Next day the girl continues her search for work. She goes to the shop to see her mother and finds Mrs. Rogers has been taken suddenly ill. The woman recovers, but is told by a physician she must stop working. Margaret writes a letter to John Mitchell and he comes to Baltimore. After a long interview he convinces Margaret she must accept his offer and let Celia go.

CHAPTER VII.

Celia stood before the dressing table, mirror in hand, studying her profile. She turned her head, chin tilted, and tried the effect. She was smiling, half pleased, and half doubtful.

Her soft waving hair was arranged in a new way, drawn back from the ears. It looked more grown-up, more sophisticated. Would Barney like it?

She pushed back the little curl which insisted on touching her cheek. The curl promptly bobbed forward again.

Celia's eyes were dreamy. She was paying more attention to her appearance these days, thinking more about clothes and spending more time before the mirror since Barney had told her she was lovely looking. Barney said silly things but she liked to hear them.

"Why—mother! I didn't hear you!"

The girl turned quickly. Mrs. Rogers stood in the doorway of the bedroom. Without replying she drew off her hat, laid it with her purse and gloves on the bed and sank into a chair.

"You're awfully late," Celia continued. "They haven't any right to ask you to stay overtime these hot days! I was getting worried—"

"But you shouldn't have, dear," her mother interrupted. "I told you I'd be late this evening."

"Yes, I know. But it isn't fair for Mrs. Foster to ask you to stay."

Margaret Rogers arose. "I wasn't at the shop," she said. Her back was toward the girl. She did not see Celia's startled glance. "Not at the shop?"

"No, I—I was talking to an old friend."

There was a pause during which Celia eyed her mother expectantly. After a moment Mrs. Rogers added: "I'll tell you about it later. We'd better have dinner now, hadn't we? It must be nearly six."

"Everything's ready," Celia said, following her mother into the living room which was also a dining room. She took dishes from the cupboard and placed them on the table.

Presently they sat down to the meal. There was a salad of which Celia was proud, and a vegetable and fruit.

"I planned to have everything cold," the girl explained. "So the room wouldn't get heated."

Margaret nodded absently. The precaution had been only partly successful. A slight breeze stirred the window curtain but the air was warm.

"You're not eating, mother!"

"I'm—not hungry."

Margaret cleared her throat then and looked at her daughter. "We're going to have company this evening. I—invited my friend to call."

"But who is it?" Celia could not keep the curiosity from her voice. "You don't remember him, Celia?"

The mother said: "I used to know him long ago. Before we lived in Baltimore."

"What's his name?"

"Mitchell—John Mitchell."

Celia drew a sigh and laughed. "Well—that's a relief! Honestly, mother, when you first came in I thought something was wrong. You seemed so mysterious. I was afraid you were sick. Who is this Mitchell? I'll bet he's an old suitor of yours! Isn't he?"

For an instant Margaret's eyes held her daughter's. Her cheeks tinged with pink as she answered: "I was fond of him once. He— you must be very nice to him. Celia. I want you to look your prettiest. Wear the rose dress."

"But, mother, I don't have to be here when he comes do I? Barney's going to take me to the Stanley. It's the new Roman Novaro picture! You'll want to talk about old times—"

"Eight o'clock. I'm sorry to interfere with your pleasure, but, really, dear, I have reasons."

The cloud passed from Celia's face as quickly as it had appeared. She slipped around the table, kissed her mother's cheek and laughed.

"All right! Your pride and joy will stay right here beside you. When Barney comes I'll tell him the party's off."

There was a great deal to be done to get the apartment in order for company. The dishes were carried from the table. Celia washed and wiped them while Mrs. Rogers bustled about with a dust cloth, setting furniture at different angles, converting the dining room back into a living room.

"It's after seven!" her daughter reminded her presently.

"That's all right. I'm almost through, now. You'd better start dressing."

"Do you think Mr. Mitchell will stay very long?" Celia paused in the doorway to inquire.

"I don't know."

"Isn't it funny you never mentioned him before?" the girl persisted.

"Oh—I guess I just didn't happen to. Go on, Celia. Get ready."

The girl had just slipped the rose frock over her head when Mrs. Rogers raised the lid of the old trunk and began fumbling through the upper tray. She drew out her jewel box.

"Here—Celia, I want you to wear this."

It was the little gold locket. Celia had never seen her mother wear the trinket nor had Margaret Rogers ever offered it to her daughter before. The locket hung on a narrow black ribbon and Margaret tied it about the girl's throat.

Celia turned to catch a view in the mirror. She felt her mother's arms flung suddenly about her.

"Darling—we've been happy together—haven't we?" Margaret murmured brokenly.

"Why, of course! Of course we have."

"So many things other girls have that you've missed," the mother went on. "But you'll have them too, Celia."

The girl drew away, eyeing her mother curiously. It was odd for Margaret Rogers to show such emotion.

"Here—let me help you dress," the girl said. She began to undo fastenings of her mother's gown.

Five minutes later a shrill whistle came from downstairs.

"That's Barney," Celia said. "I'll run down and tell him I can't come."

She had not attempted the new coiffure. The brown curls framed the girl's face as usual. The bright dress added colour to her cheeks and her eyes were shining as she hurried down the stairs.

"Hello, Barney."

The young man's greeting was a second whistle, low intended to express amazement.

"Say—Shields exclaimed. "Somebody's looking pretty swell. I didn't by mistake ask you to dine at the Ritz-Carlton, did I?"

Celia laughed.

"Of course. Don't you remember? I'm terribly sorry though. I can't go."

He thought it was part of the joke.

"And why not, oh, maiden fair?"

"Because mother's got company coming. Really, I'm serious. Barney. I mean I can't go to the movies with you. She only told me at dinner time. I tried to beg off but it's no use."

"Can't you stay a while and then duck out?"

"No, I thought of that too. It's some friend of mother's she hasn't seen for years and she says I've got to be there."

"Has your company come yet?"

"No."

"Well, you could hop in the car and drive around a couple of blocks, couldn't you? Gosh, I'd like to see you for a minute or two and we can't very well talk here."

Celia hesitated. She glanced up toward the apartment where her mother was waiting.

"I shouldn't," she said softly, "but I will!"

Fifteen minutes later a girl in rose silk with windblown curls and sparkling eyes ran up the stairs leading to the third-floor apartment. She was late and yet her heart was singing.

"Maybe he hasn't come yet," she told herself hopefully.

But as soon as she reached the top of the stairs she knew that she was wrong. Celia saw the stranger sitting beside the window. The light shone on his face. Involuntarily the girl stopped. A curious, terrifying feeling came over her.

Celia, standing in the shadowed hallway, felt the tenseness of the room's atmosphere. She drew back, steadying herself with a hand on the railing.

Her mother's voice came to her but Celia could not distinguish the words. Margaret Rogers sat with

"Fuss and feathers," as our grandfathers used to call feminine fashions, may again be an apt description, due to the same cause. For the neglected father is coming into the modes again. David Cox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer costume designer, put this prediction into practice, when he designed the costumes for Judith Vosselli, stage star, when she appeared with Lawrence Tibbett in "The Rogue Song."

In her court dress, in the role of the Countess, Miss Vosselli carried white plumes and ivory, as a striking contrast to a velvet evening dress.

"A fan" says Miss Vosselli, "is perhaps the cleverest trick there is of showing off one's costume to advantage, but of late has been neglected by the younger generation as somewhat of a nuisance to carry. It is more of a formal touch, and, especially if it's a feather fan, has to be handled with skilful care. In former days handling a fan was a fine art. Cleverly done, it displays a woman's grace and charm as perhaps nothing else can do."

"Now it seems the feather fan is coming back again. In Paris several shapes are being worn with formal costumes, and the movies here are beginning to take it up."

Miss Vosselli plays the Countess in the new picture, which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre. It is a drama of love and adventure, laid in Russia and the Caucasus Mountains, with Tibbett playing a swashbuckling singing bandit chief. He sings a number of songs in the play. A spectacular Albertina Rasch ballet is another feature. The cast, including Catherine Dale Owen, Wallace Macomber, Kate Price, Nance O'Neil, Burr McIntosh, James Bradbury, Jr., Ulrich Haupt, Florence Lake, Elsa Alsen and others.

A unique feature is the comedy relief, provided by Laurel and Hardy, the well-known comedy team.

"The Cuckoos."

A whirlwind of nonsense and riotous fun came to the screen of the Central Theatre yesterday under the title "The Cuckoos," which is a departure for motion pictures. It is not a revue; it is not a musical comedy;—no previously used classification could fit this picture. We can certainly describe it as one of the funniest pictures ever seen in Hongkong.

"The Cuckoos" carries a touching little romantic story; it is lavishly dressed and beautifully photographed, with a large part in Technicolor; it boasts a cast of featured players, nine hitting song hits are introduced.

The comedy of Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, stars of the piece, runs riot throughout the whole show. They were featured in "Rio Rita."

Wheeler and Woolsey are aided to no small extent by little Dorothy Lee, cutest of screen comedienne, and Jobyna Howland, competent player from the Broadway musical comedy stage.

The remainder of the cast includes June Clyde and Hugh Trevor, Mitchell Lewis, one of the best "heavies" in pictures to-day, Margarita Padula, "Hallelujah" singer in "Hit the Deck," and Ivan Lebedeff, suave and polished actor.

PATHETIC STORIES BY SURVIVORS.

Tokyo, Oct. 30.

Pathetic stories of the survivors of the Misha massacre appear in vernacular papers. They indicate that the first intimation of the impending catastrophe was the sound of a rifle shot, followed almost immediately by the war cries of savages, who, armed with swords, spears, and other primitive weapons, burst upon the peaceful scene, and sprang among the spectators and participants at the athletic meeting, which most of the inhabitants were attending.

Within a short time the gaily decorated school grounds had been converted into a shambles, the savages slaughtering men, women and children and indiscriminately cutting off their heads.

Most of the 48 survivors who have so far been accounted for, escaped by hiding beneath the floors of houses, or fleeing to the neighbouring hills. One small boy owed his life to a faithful aborigine servant, who carried him on his back to safety, after his father, a police official, had been ruthlessly murdered.—Reuter.

her back toward the door. The man nodded his head as if in agreement to what had been said.

Celia was trembling. She could not take her eyes from the man's face. Who was John Mitchell? What had he come for?

She conquered her fear and stepped forward.

"Mother—I hope I'm not late—tried to hurry."

Margaret turned.

"Oh, Celia! I was wondering what had become of you. We have company."

The girl moved toward John Mitchell. He arose, bowed formally and held out his hand to her.

"How do you do?" he said slowly. "So you are Celia."

The girl raised her eyes to Mitchell's cold, appraising glance.

"Celia," Margaret Rogers cut in in a voice that was a sob. "Darling—this is your father!"

FATAL ACCIDENT IN NATHAN ROAD.

INQUEST PROCEEDINGS AT KOWLOON.

The death of a Chinese, Ma Fat, (42), through being knocked down by a motor car near Public Square Street, off Nathan Road, on the night of October 23, was the subject of an inquiry by Mr. Butters, sitting with a jury, at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon.

Dr. P. F. S. Koch, after deposing to the injuries sustained by the deceased, said that death was due to hemorrhage. The injuries were consistent with the deceased having been knocked down by a motor car.

The driver of the car, named Ismail, said that he was conveying Mr. K. K. Cannon, the proprietor of Whiteway's cinema, and Mr. P. V. Devan, the agent, along Nathan Road towards the Star ferry. Nearing Public Square Street the deceased ran across the road from the left to the right. When he first noticed the deceased, he was about ten feet away from the car.

Witness sounded his horn, and the deceased stopped running and tried to turn back, and was knocked down by the left mudguard of the car.

Witness was travelling at about fifteen miles an hour at the time. He applied the foot brake and stopped a little way from the deceased who was lying on his side.

He had not been run over by the car. The road on the right side was under repair. Mr. Cannon and Mr. Devan got into the car unassisted.

Witness was a qualified driver, having been tested in Sumatra, though he had not been tested in Hongkong.

Mr. Cannon and Mr. Devan both corroborated the driver's evidence. Traffic Sergeant Clarke said that he had tested the car and had found the brakes to be in excellent working order.

The jury returned a verdict of "death by misadventure."

MOTOR AUCTIONS.

GOOD BUSINESS DONE AT WHITTA'S SALES.

The popularity of Whitta's motor auctions, which are held at advertised intervals at Cameron Road, Kowloon, was evidenced by the large number of buyers who attended yesterday afternoon, when a large variety of motor-cars, trucks, motor-cycles and accessories were sold. On the whole the prices obtained were most satisfactory, yielding a reasonable return to owners and providing buyers with purchases at moderate prices. Several lots fetched high figures and the total business done was between $9,000 and $10,000.

In addition, there were such things as grease guns, electric horns, speedometer heads, search-lights, oil gauges, ammeters, hydraulic jacks, junction boxes, Westinghouse fuse blocks and control horn switches, wiper blades, interior mirrors, side ventilators and tyres. These are all useful things to car and motor-cycle owners, and found ready buyers.

Altogether the auction was highly successful, both from the point of view of sellers and buyers, and those interested should watch for the date of the next sale. The organisation of a motor auction is an innovation in Hongkong and these held so far have proved that not only does it provide an easy means of selling machines, but in the great majority of cases a good price has been obtained.

Yesterday, Mr. F. V. Whitta, the auctioneer, dealt very frankly with the various lots, explaining not only the good points but also calling attention to any defects. When most lots were sold the purchaser was informed that if any defect showed itself, or any machine was not satisfactory, the trouble would be put right free of charge. Such announcements go to show that customers are given a fair deal, and can confidently buy anything they fancy.

FRANCE AND ITALY.

REPLY TO MUSSOLINI'S LATEST DECLARATION.

Paris, Oct. 30.

The Government yesterday gave a brilliant banquet in honour of the Atlantic airmen, Costes and Bellonte.

M. Tardieu, in a speech, referred to the position of France, and said they were living in a time of material and mental trouble, when a superfluity of words is used exceeding the possibility of acts. "Our people is strong and wise, and does not believe in giving lessons to other peoples."

This declaration of the Premier is generally considered to be a reply to Mussolini's violent speech the other day, when he spoke of an alleged menace to Italy's frontiers.—Havas.

[In the course of a speech at Rome on Oct. 27, Mussolini declared:

"A moral war is being waged against Italy, and side by side with that moral war, preparations for war are still being hastened along the Italian frontiers."

He added that Fascist Italy would arm because other nations were arming, and would disarm when everyone else had been disarmed.]

CHINA OUTLOOK

REVIEWED.

NANKING'S FINANCIAL POSITION.

Nanking, Oct. 30.
With the termination of civil strife in North China, a spokesman of the Nanking Finance Ministry has announced that the Government suffered tremendous financial losses during the recent operations, but it is now hoped that Nanking will need to spend only $21,000,000 a month for the maintenance of the Nationalist Divisions under Marshal Chiang Kai-shek. The spokesman says that the $21,000,000 allowance is the limit that can be afforded, and any attempt to increase the amount will mean disaster. The Government is, therefore, seriously considering the drawing up of a general disbandment scheme.

Human Changes.

The political sensation in Nanking, following the dismissal of the Military Governor, General Ho Chien, still engages the attention of Nanking Government circles and, in this connexion, the Government has dispatched the 60th and 61st Nationalist Divisions, (Kwangtung) into Hunan Province, to be stationed between Hankow and Changsha. The Nanking Government is fearful of a rebellion by General Ho Chien's subordinates, and there are rumours that General Ho Chien's divisional commanders are negotiating an alliance with the "Ironside" and Kwangsi commanders at Nanning and Liuchow. The Nanking Executive is considering the appointment of General Chiang Kwans-nai, (head of the 61st Nationalist Division) as Military Governor of Hunan.

Chaos in Shansi.

While this so-called disbandment and re-distribution of forces is going on in Central China, the Shansi forces defeated along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, are withdrawing into Shansi. The unexpected return of these large contingents has caused a sudden increase in prices of wheat and all food-stuff. Wheat, the staple food in Shansi, is worth $24 a picul—a record price.

Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang is appealing to the Shansi Provincial Government for money to maintain the Kuominchun army, and to observers, this Shansi-Kuominchun alliance will last as long as a military contribution is forthcoming monthly from the Shansi Treasury.

The Kuominchun, C-in-C, by the way, is asking for a monthly allowance of $300,000, a considerable sum from the Shansi point of view, during the present period of financial stringency. Marshal Feng has stated that he is confident of surviving the military crisis, and hopes to enlist 120,000 new soldiers in the near future.

Meanwhile, Feng is not losing sight of the Nanking Government, and is currying the favour of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek for a monthly contribution to support his nine Divisions, each division consisting of 15,000 men.

Feng's Terms.

In explicit terms, the "Christian" General is suggesting to the Christian President that he desires a clean hand in the administration of his Kuominchun Government in Shensi and would resent the invasion of a Nationalist army into Shensi. The "Christian" General concludes by demanding that many of his former Kuominchun contingents need immediate disbandment and that in this connexion Nanking should provide $2,000,000. Knowing, however, that Nanking will never consent to give him the two million dollars the "Christian" General concludes by stating that as soon as the money comes from Nanking he will leave for a foreign country with the assurance that his former comrades in the Kuominchun army will be well provided for by the distribution of the two million dollars.

It is stated that Marshal Feng is suggesting terms to Nanking only in order to delay the Nationalist invasion into Shensi, hoping meanwhile to enlist Shansi support to save him from a total extermination. On the other hand, Marshal Chiang Kai-shek is said to be too tired of the prolonged operations and fearful of the expansion of Manchuria's powers in North China to push an expedition into the remote north-western regions of China. The outcome is most uncertain and the military situation in North China will depend to a very large extent as to how the Nanking and Manchurian Governments handle the Sino-Soviet differences.

ALLEGATIONS OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

PARTNER OF SHIPPING COMPANY CHARGED.

A dispute between the Hongkong manager of the Young Nam Shipping Company and the other partners was brought before Mr. Williams, at the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon, when Ng Kwong-ting was charged with theft or embezzlement of a sum of $4,750.

Mr. E. S. C. Brookes, appeared for the complainant, Dr. Lam Yeung-hi, a partner, while Mr. Leo d'Almada, Jr. (instructed by Mr. J. M. Remedios) represented the defendant.

According to Mr. Brookes, the complainant was the doctor on board the s.s. Seistan and also a partner in the Young Nam Shipping Company, of Hongkong and Singapore, who were the charterers of the ship. The defendant was also a partner in the firm and managed the Hongkong branch. In Hongkong the firm carried on business under the name of the Yee Fung Shipping Company at 99, Winglok Street.

Part of the business of the firm, continued Mr. Brookes, was the transport of passengers between Hongkong and Singapore, and, as his Worship probably knew, various boarding houses in Hongkong made it their business to canvass passengers and to act as agents for passengers. The money was paid to the boarding house proprietors, who, after deducting their commission, paid the balance to the shipping company.

Nature of Charge.

The general nature of the charge against the defendant, said Mr. Brookes, was that he did not account correctly for the receipts from boarding house proprietors. That was to say if he received $14 in respect of each charge, he entered in the books $10 and he therefore embezzled $4 per head.

In July last the complainant arrived in the Colony on board the s.s. Seistan in the ordinary course and before he returned to Singapore by the ship he enquired from the defendant the price he was charging for passengers. The defendant personally told him that the nominal figure was $15 but the actual amount was $14 per head.

Proceeding Mr. Brookes, said that among other things, it was the defendant's duty, being in charge of the Hongkong office, to send the accounts to Singapore showing the amounts received on each trip. This account would go down by the next trip the steamer made.

On the trip following that in July which Mr. Brookes had just mentioned, the accounts were duly received at Singapore and the figures showed that $10 had been received per passenger, whereas, as he had said before, the defendant had personally told Dr. Lam that the amount was $14 net.

Dr. Lam consulted with the other partners who gave him a letter addressed to the defendant authorising the complainant to proceed to Hongkong to investigate. In pursuance of the letter Dr. Lam arrived in the Colony on September 25 and went to the firm's premises in Winglok Street but found the defendant was not there at the time.

Examined Books.

In the absence of the defendant (and being a partner of the firm)

BRITISH NAVAL REVIEW.

DOMINION DELEGATES TO WITNESS.

London, Oct. 30.

The Imperial Conference delegates will visit the fleet at sea on Saturday. They will embark at Weymouth, and see the gathering of sixty war vessels of all types, for which a comprehensive programme has been prepared to give the guests an opportunity of seeing the characteristics of each class.

The occasion will also have historic interest, as some ships which will be present, such as the Iron Duke (Admiral Jellicoe's flagship at Jutland) are due to pass out of the service before long, under the London Naval Treaty, which became operative on Monday. —British Wireless.

he had a perfect right to do, he inspected the book kept by the defendant showing receipts and payments. He made rough extracts and ascertained the amount the defendant had entered in the book as having been received from the boarding house proprietors, not only on the particular trip referred to above, but for other trips as well. He then went to the boarding house proprietors and ascertained from them the actual amount received by the defendant and from them he got confirmation that the defendant had not entered the actual amount received.

Continuing Mr. Brookes said that the complainant then went back to the firm's offices and showed the defendant the letter he had brought with him from Singapore. He requested the defendant to show him the account book but accused, however, refused to show it or to give any information on the subject at all.

In order that his Worship would understand the case better, Mr. Brookes produced two statements, one of which was of figures taken from the book kept by the defendant and the other from the books of boarding house proprietors. Mr. Brookes mentioned that it would be seen that females were charged $1.50 more than males because of certain formalities which had to be gone through in their case.

Figures Compared.

Comparing the figures it would be seen on trip No. 11 that the actual amount received by the defendant in the case of males was $13, whereas he had entered only $11, thereby making $2 profit. In the case of females, the figures in the board house books were $14.50 while the defendant only entered $12.50 making another $2.

Mr. Brookes pointed out that on eight trips the total received by the defendant amounted to $44,784 whereas he had only entered $41,106 leaving a balance $3,678 which was the actual amount he is alleged to have embezzled according to the books of two boarding houses. When the charge was first brought the prosecution did not have any figures and his client had only arrived back in Hongkong on Tuesday. It had only been possible to go through the books of two boarding houses.

Mr. Brookes asked that the figure of $4,750 in the charge be allowed to remain in the event of further discoveries but should his Worship convict and the sum embezzled be only $3,678 he could

ARMISTICE DAY. OBSERVANCE.

RELIGIOUS SERVICE AT THE HONGKONG CENOTAPH.

THIS YEAR'S CHANGE.

To ensure that the official observance of Armistice Day in Hongkong shall be as nearly as possible identical with that in London, a departure is being made this year in the usual Cenotaph ceremony on November 11.

Instead of the ceremony being confined to the laying of wreaths after the Two Minutes' Silence, the official religious services, which has previously been held in St.
John's Cathedral, will this year be included in the Cenotaph observance.

It will be conducted by local clergy, with choir and members of the Philharmonic Society in attendance to lead the singing. Immediately after the sounding of "Reveille" by the Somerset Light Infantry, which follows upon the Silence, the whole assembly will sing the hymn "O God our Help".

This will be followed by prayer,
the pronouncement of the Blessing, and the singing of the National Anthem.

The other arrangements for the solemn observance take a similar form to those of past years.

From a plan which has been officially drawn up, His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by the General Officer Commanding, the Officer Commanding R. A. F., and the Commodore, R. N., A. D.
C., Indian, Orderly Officers and Members of the Executive and Legislative Councils will form up on the South side of the Cenotaph in front of the Supreme Court.

Opposite to them will be the clergy, choir, Army detachments,
R. A. F., H. K. V. D. C., Scouts, Girl Guides and St. John Ambulance, and on the north side will be the band of the S. L. I.

All troops and representative bodies are specially requested to be in their positions not later than 10.45. His Excellency will arrive ten minutes later and after the Pipers of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders have played the Lament "Flowers of the Forest", the Silence will be observed, succeeded by the service, and finally the placing of wreaths and tributes at the foot of the monument by H. E. the Governor, and his attendants, who will be followed by representatives.

His Excellency will depart after this ceremony, and after the clergy and troops have departed, civilians may then lay wreaths.

REVOLUTION PLOTTED IN GREECE.

FORMER DICTATOR PLACED UNDER ARREST.

Athens, Oct. 30.

General Panagoulas, the former Dictator of Greece, was arrested at his residence in Eleusis to-day following the discovery of a plot to restore him to power with the aid of insurgent forces.

The police made arrests elsewhere, but a number of the conspirators escaped owing to a member of the Government forces surrounding their headquarters, accidentally letting off his rifle.

The Eastern Extension Telegraph Co. has been advised by its Head Office that the estimated traffic receipts of the Imperial and International Communication Limited during September were £424,138 compared with receipts of £483,985 in September last year. The aggregate receipts from January to September were £4,080,171 this year and £4,599,483 in 1929.

BRITISH EXAMPLE TO WORLD.

PRINCE TALKS ON THE COMMONWEALTH.

A LEAGUE OF UNITED BUT INDEPENDENT NATIONS.

CONFERENCE REPORTS

London, Oct. 30.

The British Commonwealth of Nations was held up as an example to the world by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at a dinner held in the Guildhall under the auspices of the League of Nations Union, at which all the Dominions were represented by eminent persons.

The Prince pointed out that the gathering represented one-fourth of the entire human race, comprising different races, languages and conditions, maintaining their separate nationalities and pursuing their own method of development.

They had, said the Prince, passed beyond the stage at which it was the duty of a nation vehemently to assert its independence. "They settle their differences round a table, and if a quarter of the human race has thus proved the practicability of a true League of united but independent nations, is it mere idealism to hope that the remaining three-fourths will be able to tread the same path?"—Reuter.

Imperial Schemes.

London, Oct. 30.

The heads of the delegations to the Imperial Conference will meet to-morrow to receive and consider such reports as have been completed by the Committees entrusted with detailed examination of the questions on the agenda.

Inter-Imperial constitutional questions were referred to a Committee under Lord Chancellor Sankey, and its Drafting Committee to-day presented draft reports on various aspects of its work. The completed part of a draft report constitutes a lengthy and highly technical document and includes sections dealing with the operation of Dominion Legislation, nationality, the question of channels of communication to be used between His Majesty's Government and Dominion and Foreign Governments, and questions affecting the position of Governors-General.

The Sankey Committee has decided to request further time before its final report is sent on to the heads of the delegations.

Alternatives to Tariff.

The Committee on Inter-Imperial Economic Co-operation to-day approved the reports of sub-committees which have been examining the possibility of employing methods alternative to a tariff, such as quota bulk purchase, import boards and extension of the work of the Empire Marketing Board to specific commodities—canned fruit, canned fish, fresh fruit, and dairy produce. The Committee is now engaged on its general report to the heads.

The Overseas Settlement Committee has completed its report, which reviews the whole problem of State-assisted migration within the Empire.

Schemes Considered.

Organisations set up both in the Dominions and in Britain, and the measures taken to ensure that the settlement of migrants is of advantage to themselves and to the countries in which they settle, have been closely examined. These include assisted passages, with assured employment, schemes such as the 3,000 families scheme in Canada, the similar and more recent scheme in New Brunswick, schemes to encourage juvenile settlers, and various schemes for

SPEEDING ON AN OLD
MOTOR-CAR.

TIFFIN-TIME RUSH.

Mr. H. Kuhrt, of the China Export and Import and Bank Company, was summoned before Mr.
Butters, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, for having driven car No. 612, along Waterloo Road in a manner dangerous to the public on October 12, at 1.15 p.m.

Traffic Sergeant Clarke said the defendant turned into Waterloo Road from Prince Edward Road. He noticed that the defendant was speeding round the bend, and followed him on his motor cycle up to near the railway bridge, when the defendant slowed down. Witness's speedometer registered 46 miles an hour.
Sergeant North was in his sidecar. The road is very broad and fairly straight. There were a few pedestrians and one or two vehicles on the road.

The defendant said it was the tiffin hour and he was in a hurry.
He was driving an old Fiat car, which was one of the first of its kind to come to Hongkong, and it could not exceed over 40 miles an hour. He estimated his speed at 55 kilometers (approximately 33 miles an hour). He had been driving for six years and had never been in Court for any motoring offence.

Mr. Butters discharged the defendant with a caution.

IMPORTANT ARMY APPOINTMENTS.

NEW ADJUTANT-GENERAL TO THE FORCES.

London, Oct. 30.

The War Office announces the appointment of General Sir Archibald Montgomery-Massingberd to be Adjutant-General to the Forces, in succession to General Sir Walter Braithwaite.—British Wireless.

The new Adjutant-General has held the Southern Command since 1923. He served in the South African War, being wounded and mentioned in despatches, whilst in the Great War he was nine times mentioned in despatches, given the C.B. and K.C.M.G. decorations, as well as French and American honours. He was Deputy Chief of the General Staff in India from 1920 to 1922 and Colonel-Commandant of the R.A. in 1927.

Indian Appointment.

London, Oct. 30.

The appointment of Lieutenant General Sir Kenneth Wigram as Chief of the General Staff in India, in succession to Lieutenant General Sir Cyril Deverell, with effect from 21st March next, has been approved.—British Wireless.

Lieut. General Sir Wigram, C.B., C.S.I., has been commanding the Waziristan District in India since 1926. His service includes the N.W.

the training of intending overseas settlers in England.
There are three of the large training centres in existence, in addition to five hostels for young women and eight for boys. This elaborate system has been reviewed, and the Committee has completed its report, in which its views are expressed as to the wisdom of keeping the machinery of the present economic conditions throughout the Empire.—
